You might be one of those guys that can take on any type of chore that comes your way, but as with most of us, we need professional help when it comes to this kind of job.

There is no difference if the job is small or large like adding a room, if you follow these steps, you can select the right person for the remodeling job.

The best place to look for a good contractor is with your immediate group of contacts. These can be co workers, fellow church members, or even close friends. If you know someone that had a remodel done by someone and they are happy with the work that was done, there is a good chance that the contractor will do a great job for you too.

If you cannot find a contractor to do the remodel job on your home through your friends and co workers, you will have to look in the local papers and local yellow pages for prospects to complete the job.

It is always a good idea to contact at least 5 contractors and get an estimate for the project from each one. This is always a good idea and helps you get a fair deal on the work.

Now, once you have found your man, you should contact the city and county licensing offices and make sure that the contractor has all the proper business licenses and contractors certifications in place. This will give you a good idea of the professionalism of the contractor. If you find that this is not in order, you need to move on to contestant number two.

You can then find out if the company or contractor of your choice has any complaints filed against them at the local B. B.. If they have unresolved complaints, you may want to look for someone else, this does not show good character.

Once you have checked out your contractor and he looks good, you can then move ahead with the project and knows that it will be done correctly.
